THURSDAY, April 30, 1761.

Cambridge, in New-England, March 31, 1761.

A TRANSIT of Venus over the Sun being, beyond compariſon, the moſt curious and uncommon appearance the heavens afford, as well as of the greateſt conſequence, has for a long time been a principal object of the conſideration of Aſtronomers; and it is no wonder if a general curioſity ſhould be excited among other perſons alſo, by the near approach of ſo rare a phænomenon. So very rare indeed it is, as to have happen'd but once, ſince the revival of the antient Pythagorean, which is the true Aſtronomy, by Copernicus, about 240 years ago. Before that period, they paſs'd unobſerved, if not unthought of. There is only one that has been ſince, was in the year 1639, on the 24th of November O. S. This was obſerved by a young Engliſh aſtronomer, whoſe name was Horrox, and his friend, in Lancaſhire, for about half an hour; till the too early ſetting of the Sun put an end to their obſervations. Theſe two were the only perſons from the beginning of the world, that had the good fortune to behold this curious ſpectacle. In the long interval ſince elapſed, of above 120 years, it has never happened once; ſo that the Tranſit next following that of 1639 is this of the 6th of June 1761; which was predicted by the great Kepler ſo long ago as the year 1604. On that day, the planet VENUS, which now makes ſo brilliant an appearance every evening in the weſt, will be totally deprived of her borrowed luſtre; and, for the ſecond time ſince the creation, will be ſeen traverſing the face of the Sun, in the form of a ſpot, perfectly round and perfectly black; making a peculiar ſort of ſolar eclipſe, by covering a ſmall part of the Sun's luminous diſk. The diameter of the planet will be $\frac{1}{35}$ part of the Sun's diameter, and ſhe will paſs 9 min. 44 ſec. to the ſouthward of the Sun's center, or almoſt $\frac{1}{3}$ part of the Sun's diameter, within his ſouthern edge; ſpending near 7 hours in the paſſage. Upon this occaſion, thouſands will be employed in gazing on a ſight, which neither they nor their fathers had ſeen; every teleſcope in Europe will be turned to the Sun; and the moſt skilful aſtronomers there, buſy in making their obſervations with all poſſible accuracy.

Such obſervations will not be confined to Europe: They will be carried on in Aſia and Africa with the ſame attention. For it ought to be particularly mention'd, as it will for ever be remember'd, to the honour of ſome of the greateſt Princes of the preſent age, that amidſt the tumults of war they have liſten'd to the ſtill voice of the Sciences, and have ſent into the remoteſt countries of the South and Eaſt, proper perſons to make the important obſervations. Important they may well be called, ſince (beſides other purpoſes not ſo needful to be enlarged on at this time) thoſe made in diſtant parts of the earth, when compared together, will ſolve one of the moſt noble and difficult problems in aſtronomy,—that of finding the diſtance of the Sun from the Earth. They will determine this diſtance, not in the way of probable conjecture, but of mathematical demonſtration; and that to a degree of exactneſs far ſuperior to what has ever yet been attained to, or ever can be in any other method. The methods heretofore uſed for this purpoſe by aſtronomers were ſtrictly true in ſpeculation, but not ſo proper for practice; the obſervations required in them being ſuch as could not be made with near the exactneſs as the preſent obſervations may be. At the ſame time, the diſtance of Venus and of all the other planets will be diſcovered;—and of all the comets too. And when their true diſtances are once known, the real magnitudes of all theſe bodies will be likewiſe determined. Which points well ſettled, will elucidate ſome others that will give us a deeper inſight into the wonderful works of GOD.

It were greatly to be wiſhed, that America alſo might bear a part in ſo laudable an undertaking;—an undertaking not calculated to ſerve the ſeparate views of any particular party, but the common intereſt of the civilized world; and in the benefit of which the whole Republic of letters, in every nation and in every age, will equally partake. For the more obſervers there are, and the more diſtant their ſtations, the more firmly and accurately will the concluſion be eſtabliſhed. But unfortunately for us, this moſt deſirable ſpectacle, which will be preſented to all the other continent, will be concealed from the greateſt part of our weſtern world, by happening when it is night with us. This may be ſeen by the following calculation, carefully made from the beſt aſtronomical tables that have ever been publiſhed;—thoſe of the celebrated Dr. Halley; which, if not perfectly exact, are yet probably very near the truth: According to which the times of this Tranſit, as reckoned under our meridian, will be as follow,

	D.	h.	m.
VENUS firſt touches the SUN, 1761. June 5	9	21
Her center enters — — — —			33
She is wholly within — — — —			45
Middle, or Venus neareſt the Sun's center —	12	40
Venus begins to paſs off the Sun —	15	36
Her center paſſes off — — — —			48
She wholly leaves the Sun —	16	00

Hence it appears, that under our meridian and near it, the whole of the Tranſit will be in the night. In New-England, it will begin about 2 h. after Sun-ſet on the 5th of June, and end half an hour before Sun-riſe on the 6th. And as our meridian runs thro' the length of America, the Tranſit will be inviſible to almoſt the whole of this continent. The beginning may indeed be ſeen a little before Sun-ſet, in the moſt north-weſterly parts, about California; and the end, a little after Sun-riſe in the moſt north-eaſterly parts, about Newfoundland. At Halifax, it will be intirely over juſt as the Sun is riſing. At Louiſburg, the laſt interior contact, when Venus begins to paſs off, will be but one minute after Sun-riſe; and this is the neareſt place to New-England, where Venus's leaving the Sun can be obſerved. Both the beginning and end cannot be ſeen in any Part of America, but what is in 60 d. or upwards of north latitude. But it may juſtly be doubted, whether in the places now ſpecified, where the Tranſit will be viſible, there be any perſons qualified to obſerve it.

The foregoing general calculation may be reduced to any other place, by allowing the difference of meridians. But in adapting this calculation to particular places, regard muſt be had to the parallax of Venus; that is, to the difference of her place on the Sun, when view'd from different parts of the earth. The effect of this parallax will be, that in ſome parts of the earth the whole Tranſit will be of a ſhorter; in others, of a longer continuance, than according to the foregoing calculation. And where only the beginning or end is viſible, they will happen ſooner in ſome places, and later in others, on this account. And it is by comparing theſe differences together, that the Sun's diſtance will be determin'd. It would be endleſs to particularize here: Two or three inſtances of this diverſity may ſerve as a ſpecimen.

In Lat. 32 N. & Long. 21 E. from hence, the time of Venus's leaving the riſing Sun will not be alter'd by parallax; but will be the ſame as in the foregoing calculation, allowing only for the difference of meridians. To the ſouthward of this, the time of this phaſis will be later; to the northward, earlier. So that in Lat. 47 S. it will be 8 m. 26 ſ. later on this account; but at Louiſburg, 2 m. 31 ſ. ſooner. If this emerſion could be obſerved in the ſetting Sun in 49 N. Lat. and under a meridian 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ h. W. from hence, it would happen 8 m. 39 ſ. ſooner, on account of parallax. The difference therefore between this obſervation of the end, and that juſt mention'd in S. Lat. would be 17 m. 5 ſ. more than what is due to the difference of their meridians: and this is the greateſt difference that can take place. The differences for any aſſign'd places may be found likewiſe by computation.

Theſe concluſions are drawn from the ſuppoſition that Venus's parallax is preciſely of that quantity, which it has of late years been generally ſuppoſed to be: Other ſuppoſitions of the quantity of this parallax would lead to other concluſions as to theſe differences of time. And converſly, when it ſhall be found by the obſervations now to be made, what theſe differences of time actually are, we ſhall from thence collect what the juſt quantity of this parallax is; by which means, the hitherto immeaſurable diſtances of the heavenly bodies will at length be nicely aſcertained. J. WINTHROP.

WILLIAMSBURG, April 10.

This Day the Buſineſs of the General Aſſembly being finiſhed, his Honour the Governor gave his Aſſent to ſuch Bills as were ready, and then made the following SPEECH:

Gentlemen of the Council, Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Burgeſſes,

I AM arrived at a Day the moſt diſagreeable to me of any one ſince I have been intruſted by his Majeſty with the Adminiſtration of your Affairs: As you have ſhown yourſelves on all Occaſions dutiful Subjects, by your Loyalty and Attachment to your Sovereign and his Government, I conſider you as my Friends; as Friends, grieve to part with you. I ſhould not juſtly acquit myſelf of the Duty I owe to his Majeſty, were I to omit thanking you, before I diſmiſs you, for the Readineſs and Alacrity with which you have engaged in the Meaſures recommended to you to aſſiſt his Majeſty's Arms, in the Recovery of that Country which the French had uſurped; and on my own Part I can with Truth aſſure you, that the many Marks of Affection and Reſpect you have ſhown me, the Confidence you have placed in me, and the ſtrong Proofs you have given me of your Approbation of my Conduct, has made an Impreſſion on my Mind which nothing can efface, as long as it ſhall pleaſe the Almighty to continue to me the Bleſſings of Life and Memory.

The Conſtitution of the Council is ſuch as ſecures to me the meeting you, Gentlemen, who compoſe it, in the ſame Capacity the enſuing Aſſembly: This gives me the greateſt Satisfaction, as I have ſo often experienced your Ability and Zeal to ſerve his Majeſty, and your Integrity and Candour in conducting every Meaſure to promote his Intereſt, and the general Good of this Colony. But,

Mr. Speaker, and Gentlemen of the Houſe of Burgeſſes,

My Aſſurances of meeting you again as Particulars are not ſo certain as I could wiſh they were, for I can never expect, or even deſire, to meet an Aſſembly compoſed of Gentlemen more acceptable to myſelf; who have happily found the Means of joining your Duty to his Majeſty to your Care for the Intereſt of the Colony, which can never be ſeparated but to the Diſadvantage of both. In this Light, I hope your Conſtituents will ſee your Conduct; approve the whole Tenour of it; and ſhow their Approbation by the Choice which the Circumſtances of the Times will give them an Opportunity to make.

Gentlemen of the Council and of the Houſe of Burgeſſes,

All that remains for me to do, is to put an End to this Aſſembly, which I do with great Unwillingneſs; but it is requiſite you ſhould be now diſſolved, and you are diſſolved accordingly.

CHARLES-TOWN (SOUTH-CAROLINA) March 25.

OUR Advices from Great-Britain to the 28th January, represent Peace as an Event much wished for, but at a great Diſtance. All Kind of military Preparations are going on with the greateſt Vigour. The Fleet for the Weſt-Indies is ſaid to conſiſt of twelve capital Ships. A Fleet is likewiſe getting ready for the Eaſt-Indies. The Grand Expedition is reſumed, and carrying on with freſh Spirit. Mr. Pitt continues the Darling of the King and People. Sweden and Poland, eſpecially the latter, are heartily tired of the War, and it is ſaid with Confidence, they will withdraw before the next Campaign. In the mean time the Motions of the King of Sardinia give Reaſon to dread the Flames of War will ſpread to Italy.

On Thurſday Captain Colbert, ſet out for Auguſta, with the Chickeſaw which came with him hither, and Preſents for thoſe that remained at Auguſta, and had been with him in his laſt Excurſion. He is to go towards the Cherokees with them, and ſome of the Lower Chickeſaws, immediately, without waiting for the Army coming up.

Letters from Gentlemen at Auguſta of the 10th, 14th and 16th Inſtant, ſay, "The News from the Upper Creeks is not near ſo bad as was at firſt repreſented. That Nation will ſcarcely break with us; what Miſchief has lately happened, was done by thoſe Villains who had a Hand in the Murders laſt Year, and was not in the leaſt countenanced by any of the Headmen. Douglas, with his Goods and Horſes, are ſafe, under the Protection of the Gun Merchant. The Wolf King's Return, with the Accounts he carries, will have great Influence in the Creek Nation. His coming down here was very lucky, and Governor Bull's inviting him to Charleſtown was well judged, and of great Service."

We hear from Mr. Galphin's Fort at Silver-bluff, that there never was known ſo great Plenty of Fiſh there as at preſent, which is a providential Relief to the poor People who have taken Shelter there. The Creeks ſtill remain at that Fort, and the People that Way flatter themſelves that theſe Indians will keep off worſe Neighbours. One Perry, who was ſent down lately from thence with Diſpatches to the Governor, found on his Return, his Houſe burnt, and other Miſchief done; it is uncertain whether by Indians, or white People, no Indian Tracks could be diſcovered.

Yeſterday his Honour the Governor received Diſpatches from Captain Lauchlan M'Intoſh, Commandant of Fort Prince-George, Keowee.

Fort Prince-George, March 15. The Day after Mr. Miln and Major Thompſon left us, four Priſoners were brought here by the Indians, viz. Stephens's Wife and two Children, and one Trowel, of Captain Demere's Company. The Indians continue to bring in the Priſoners; we have received 20 in all ſince Mr. Miln's Departure, viz. 12 Women and Children, and 8 Men. To-morrow ſix more are expected. Some Days ago Attakullakulla, or the Little Carpenter, and his Brother Tiſtoey, the Wolf of Keowee, &c. came to this Fort, and on the 12th Inſtant Attakullakulla delivered ſome Priſoners, and a Talk, in the Name of the whole Nation, to Captain M'Intoſh: He ſaid, That Willanawaw and M'Namar are gone to the Virginia Camp, with ſeveral white Priſoners, agreeable to what he had told Colonel Byrd. Salloue, the Young Warrior of Eſtatoe, with a Number of his deſperate Gang, are gone out againſt the Settlements, chiefly, it is ſaid, for Proviſions, of which they are in great Want. Salloue ſaid he got 100 of the Rangers Horſes. Captain M'Intoſh gave Attakullakulla ſeveral Preſents, which he immediately diſtributed among his Attendants, who are in Number near 500. He is ſtill here, and has ſent a Talk to the Governor, with a String of white Beads, in Behalf of the whole Nation. This faithful Cherokee is treated with great Kindneſs by the Commandant, as his unalterable Attachment to the Britiſh Intereſt merits. He enquired, in the moſt affectionate Manner, for his old Friend Captain John Stuart, and has deſired Captain M'Intoſh to acquaint that Gentleman of his good Wiſhes, and that he will be glad to hear from him or ſee him.

On Monday the 16th Inſtant, eight of the Settlers on Buſh River, a Branch of Saluda, went from Brookes's Fort to look after their Plantations, and were ſet upon by a Party of Indians, ſuppoſed to be Salloue and his Party, who killed and ſcalped Cadwallader Eaton, and took Edward Box Priſoner; the remaining ſix got off, and returned to the Fort. Eaton's Body was ſhockingly mangled, a Bullet was lodged in his Hip, on which he fell, he was ſtabbed in five different Places, with a broken Bayonet, and his Head was almoſt cut off; the Bayonet was found ſtuck in his Body.

April 1. This Day the Highlanders marched from Town for the Camp.

We hear from Virginia, that ſeveral large Parties of the Six Nation and other Indians, have been ſeen going againſt the Cherokees; and that both Virginia and North-Carolina are raiſing Men for the common Cauſe. We hope ſoon to hear this confirmed.

Capt. Tucker has alſo taken a Snow, but ſhe is not yet arrived, though ſhe failed ſome Days before he left the Coaſt of Hiſpaniola: It is thought ſhe is either retaken, or gone down to Jamaica. The Ketch Jenny, Aſh, Maſter, from Liſbon, was taken by the ſame Brig on the 14th. This Brig is Bermuda built, mounted eight 6 Pounders and 8 Swivels, and had about 40 Men; was from Martinico bound for Marſeilles, with a very valuable Cargo of Indico, Cocoa, and Coffee on board, which ſhe was to land at Cadiz. Captain Aſh made the 5th Veſſel ſhe had taken, three of which ſhe burnt, one of them a Schooner.

Captain Valentine's Prize, from Jamaica, is expected in every Hour, the Man of War's Claim having been thrown out of Court. The Privateer continues her Cruize.

The Schooner Delight, Thomas Wallace, Maſter, from South-Carolina for Philadelphia, run aſhore the 8th Inſtant in the Night, at Little Egg-Harbour; the Veſſel and Cargo will be entirely loſt, as the Men went aſhore, and left her to drive to Pieces: The Captain could not be found, neither will the Men give any Account of him. The Regiſter of the Veſſel was in Captain Wallace's Name, tho' the People ſay one Burns was then Maſter.

Tueſday laſt the Brig Royal-American, Captain Fairley, arrived here in thirty Days from Madeira; Some Days before he ſailed from thence, two Dutch Men of War having about 50 Sail of Merchantmen under their Convoy, for the Weſt-Indies, put in there, but were ſoon to proceed on their Voyages.

Thurſday laſt Captain Johnſon arrived here in a Brig in 29 Days from Jamaica: Off Crooked-Iſland he met with a Boat, with five Men in her, who ſaid they belonged to the Privateer Sloop Harlequin, Capt. Omen, of this Port, who was caſt away on Ackland's Key, and that they were bound to Providence, to endeavour to obtain a ſmall Sloop, to carry away all that could be ſaved of the Wreck.

About the 8th of February, the Ship Marquis of Granby, Captain Liſle, of and from Philadelphia to Liſbon, ſprung a Leak at Sea; when, within 10 Leagues of Fyall, all the Hands took to their Boat, and left her; and the next Day ſhe was drove cloſe in with St. George's, where ſhe was towed into a good Harbour.
